Demonstrators in Bamako Show Support for Malian Junta

Hundreds of people demonstrated in Mali's capital on Tuesday in support of the junta that has seized power in a coup, as debate rages over the timeframe for the country's return to civilian rule.

Months of protests over the simmering jihadist insurgency, bloody ethnic violence and endemic corruption in the country boiled over when rebel troops arrested the president and took control on August 18.

The protests were led by an opposition coalition called the June 5 Movement, and a new group calling itself the Popular Movement of September 4 organized the rally in Bamako on Tuesday.

After the coup, the junta pledged to hold fresh elections and initially proposed a three-year, military-led transition back to civilian rule, before ratcheting it back to two.

"We want the army to stay in power for as long as it takes," shopkeeper Hamza Sangare said at the Bamako protest over the din of the crowd.

"Why not three years, by end of the mandate of former president IBK?" he suggested, referring to ousted president Ibrahim Boubacar Keita, whose second five-year term had been scheduled to end in 2023.

But the 15-nation West African regional bloc ECOWAS has demanded the transition take place in 12 months -- and be led by a civilian president and prime minister.

ECOWAS, which has hit Mali with sanctions including closing borders and trade bans over the coup, said Monday that the civilian transition leaders should be appointed by September 15.

While the coup has provoked international outrage, it has received support among some in Mali, fatigued by the country's bloodshed and economic struggle.

"The soldiers, the soldiers," a group at the Bamako rally chanted, holding up Malian flags, placards saying "long live the army," and pictures of junta leader Colonel Assimi Goita.

Dozens of green minibuses that generally provide public transport were mobilized to transport the demonstrators to Bamako's Independence Square, which was a main rallying point for protesters before the coup.

The junta has organized three days of consultations with political parties and civil society groups from Thursday to plan the transition.

Ousted president Keita has been released and flew to the United Arab Emirates on Saturday for medical treatment after suffering a mini-stroke last week. VOA

Zimbabwe bans mining in game parks after outcry

Zimbabwe has banned mining in all its national parks, reversing a decision to let Chinese firms explore for coal at its famous Hwange game park.

The move came after campaigners took the government to court to prevent "ecological degradation" in parks.

Two firms had been given a licence to explore for coal in Hwange, Zimbabwe's biggest national park.

It is home to more than 40,000 elephants and numerous other species, including the endangered black rhino. In court papers filed on Monday, the Zimbabwe Environmental Lawyers Association (ZELA) warned that the park would turn into a "site for drilling, land clearance, road building and geological surveys" if coal exploration went ahead.

Following a cabinet meeting on Tuesday, Information Minister Monica Mutsvangwa announced the ban on mining with immediate effect.

"Steps are being undertaken to immediately cancel all mining titles held in national parks," she said. Ms Mutsvangwa also announced a ban on mining along most river beds, in a decision that would affect small-scale Chinese and local gold miners.

China is a major investor in Zimbabwe and a close ally of the government.

It has for a long time pursued a "Look East" policy to boost the struggling economy following sanctions imposed by Western powers angered by the government's human rights record and controversial land reform programme.

The Chinese firms had planned to mine in the park in a joint venture with the state-owned Zimbabwe Mining Development Corporation. BBC

Liberia's Charles Taylor 'bid to move prison rejected'

Taylor was sentenced to 50 years in prison by a UN-backed war crimes court

A special court in Sierra Leone has rejected a bid by convicted former Liberian President Charles Taylor to be moved from a British prison citing coronavirus risk, AFP news agency reports.

Taylor had said the coronavirus pandemic in the UK was a big threat to his life and wanted to be moved to a "safe third country", the agency reports.

The Residual Special Court for Sierra Leone said he had not specified which countries he considered safe.

The court added that the World Health Organization had not declared any country safe from Covid-19.

Taylor was sentenced to 50 years in prison by a UN-backed war crimes court at The Hague.

He was found guilty of aiding and abetting rebels in Sierra Leone during the 1991-2002 civil war. BBC

President Weah is leading from behind

FROM ALL INDICATIONS, President George Manneh Weah needs to adjust his leadership style and govern Liberia from the front rather than being a backbencher. President Weah's posture of leading Liberians from the rear is not just harming the country in so many ways, but raising a shadow over the country.

FOR NEARLY THREE years, Mr. Weah has not mustered courage enough to take charge of leadership, instead, allowing his officials to call the shots at the expense of a people-centered Presidency.

WE ARE TALKING about the 4.5 million Liberians in and out of the country including those from the opposition, not just partisans of the governing Coalition for Democratic Change.

THESE LAPSES BY the President have become very glaring so much so that outcries are pouring in about citizens not feeling the presence of the leader they elected at the ballot box in 2017 to govern the county.

PRESIDENT WEAH SEEMS to be confined or has allowed himself to be confined in a corner by so-called advisors and loyalists, who claim to know it all when their real motive is to have an opportunity to get at perceived enemies.

AS NIMBA COUNTY District#5 Representative Samuel G. Kogar observed here on Sunday, President George Manneh Weah has distanced himself from the masses, who popularly elected him.

HE CAUTIONED MR. WEAH not to destroy his popularity by avoiding people under the pretext of "security intelligence", which he described as fake.

REP. KOGAR SPECIFICALLY accused Minister of State for Presidential Affairs Nathaniel McGill, of erecting blockage around President Weah to deny key officials from interacting with the President on major national issues.

THIS IS A VERY serious allegation coming from a member of the House of Representatives, who commands a voting constituent from a vote-rich county. He is not the only one decrying such posture of the President and those surrounding the Presidency. Several other officials have similarly complained of being denied access to President Weah. Even if Mr. Weah is pressurized to come out and speak, he throws nothing but jives at perceived critics and enemies, shamelessly justifying and defending inadequacies of his leadership. It is quite disappointing and embarrassing for a President so elected by popular votes to feel insecure, afraid, and consider his subjects as enemies just half way into his term.

The Coming Global Technology Fracture

Today's international trade regime was not designed for a world of data, software, and artificial intelligence. Already under severe pressure from China's rise and the backlash against hyper-globalization, it is utterly inadequate to face the three main challenges these new technologies pose.

CAMBRIDGE - The international trade regime we now have, expressed in the rules of the World Trade Organization and other agreements, is not of this world. It was designed for a world of cars, steel, and textiles, not one of data, software, and artificial intelligence. Already under severe pressure from China's rise and the backlash against hyper-globalization, it is utterly inadequate to face the three main challenges these new technologies pose.

First, there is geopolitics and national security. Digital technologies allow foreign powers to hack industrial networks, conduct cyber-espionage, and manipulate social media. Russia has been accused of interfering in elections in the United States and other Western countries through fake news sites and the manipulation of social media. The US government has cracked down on the Chinese giant Huawei because of fears that the company's links to the Chinese government make its telecoms equipment a security threat.

Second, there are concerns about individual privacy. Internet platforms are able to collect huge amounts of data on what people do online and off, and some countries have stricter rules than others to regulate what they can do with it. The European Union, for example, has enacted fines for companies that fail to protect the EU residents' data.

Third, there is economics. New technologies give a competitive edge to large companies that can accumulate enormous global market power. Economies of scale and scope and network effects produce winner-take-all outcomes, and mercantilist policies and other government practices can result in some firms having what looks like an unfair advantage. For example, state surveillance has allowed Chinese firms to accumulate huge amounts of data, which in turn has enabled them to corner the global facial recognition market.

A common response to these challenges is to call for greater international coordination and global rules. Transnational regulatory cooperation and anti-trust policies could produce new standards and enforcement mechanisms. Even where a truly global approach is not possible - because authoritarian and democratic countries have deep disagreements about privacy, for example - it is still possible for democracies to cooperate among themselves and develop joint rules.

The benefits of common rules are clear. In their absence, practices such as data localization, local cloud requirements, and discrimination in favor of national champions create economic inefficiencies insofar as they segment national markets. They reduce the gains from trade and prevent companies from reaping the benefits of scale. And governments face the constant threat that their regulations will be undermined by companies operating from jurisdictions with laxer rules.

But in a world where countries have different preferences, global rules - even when they are feasible - are inefficient in a broader sense. Any global order must balance the gains from trade (maximized when regulations are harmonized) against the gains from regulatory diversity (maximized when each national government is entirely free to do what it wants). If hyper-globalization has already proved brittle, it is in part because policymakers prioritized the gains from trade over the benefits of regulatory diversity. This mistake should not be repeated with new technologies.

In fact, the principles that should guide our thinking on new technologies are no different from those for traditional domains. Countries may devise their own regulatory standards and define their own national security requirements. They may do what is required to defend these standards and their national security, including through trade and investment restrictions. But they have no right to internationalize their standards and try to impose their regulations on other countries.

Consider how these principles would apply to Huawei. The US government has prevented Huawei from acquiring American companies, restricted its operations in the US, launched legal proceedings against its senior management, pressured foreign governments not to work with it, and, most recently, banned US companies from selling chips to Huawei's supply chain anywhere in the world.

There is little evidence that Huawei has engaged in spying on behalf of the Chinese government. But that does not mean that it will not do so in the future. Western technical experts who have examined Huawei's code have been unable to rule out the possibility. The opacity of corporate practices in China could well obscure Huawei's links to the Chinese government.<sup>1</sup>

Under these circumstances, there is a plausible national security argument for the US - or any other country - to restrict Huawei's operations within its own borders. Other countries, including China, are not in a position to second-guess this decision.

The export ban on US companies, however, is harder to justify on national security grounds than the ban on Huawei's US-based operations. If Huawei's operations in third countries pose a security risk to those countries, their governments are in the best position to assess the risks and decide whether a shutdown is appropriate.

Moreover, the US ban confronts other countries with severe economic repercussions. It creates significant adverse effects for national telecoms companies like BT, Deutsche Telekom, Swisscom, and others in no fewer than 170 countries that rely on Huawei's kits and hardware. Perhaps worst hit are poor countries in Africa that are overwhelmingly dependent on the company's cheaper equipment.

In short, the US is free to close its market to Huawei. But US efforts to internationalize its domestic crackdown lack legitimacy.

The Huawei case is a harbinger of a world in which national security, privacy, and economics will interact in complicated ways. Global governance and multilateralism will often fail, for both good and bad reasons. The best we can expect is a regulatory patchwork, based on clear ground rules that help empower countries to pursue their core national interests without exporting their problems to others. Either we design this patchwork ourselves, or we will end up, willy-nilly, with a messy, less efficient, and more dangerous version.

GoL Launches National Aid and NGO Policy

The Government of Liberia through the Ministry of Finance and Development Planning has launched the National Aid & NGO Policy of Liberia (NAPL) to the public with a unique reporting tool - the Liberia Project Dashboard (LPD). The launch took place in Buchanan, Grand Bassa County, on Saturday September 5, 2020.

transparency, accountability as well as total openness. The aid information management system utilization will promote transparency and accountability in the development and implementation of aid programs/projects.

Liberia's Finance and Development Planning Minister, Samuel D. Tweah Jr., who launched the Liberia Project

Liberia has transitioned from a country in need of emergency humanitarian assistance to one with government's ownership of the development process and a vision of preferred development aid modalities for long-term sustainability.

According to him, Liberia was faced with capacity constraints and unsustainable debt in the immediate

The LPD is an aid information management system that will be used to collect, analyze, and report information about external assistance programs and projects. It is a flagship indicator of a new era of aid management in Liberia.

The launch of the Dashboard further confirms the overall commitment of the Liberian government to

CPP condemns violence in Nimba -constitutes Investigative Panel

The Collaborating Political Parties (CPP), says it strongly condemns the acts of violence which characterized the conduct of its Senatorial Primary in Nimba County over the weekend.

According to a statement jointly released by the four political leaders after hours of deliberations early Tuesday morning, the four leaders described the violence as unacceptable and counterproductive to achieving the objectives of the unity of the CPP for the benefit of the people of Liberia.

Following a meeting held between the Political Leaders of the Alternative National Congress (ANC), the Unity Party (UP), the Liberty Party (LP) and the All Liberian Party (ALP), the CPP has decided to constitute a four (4) member Independent Review Panel to investigate the conduct of the Nimba County Senatorial Primary. Reputable and credible citizens who are not members of the constituent parties of the CPP will serve on the Independent Review Panel and recommend a way forward to the leadership of the CPP. The IRP will begin work no later than September 9, 2020 and will conclude its work and report to the CPP leadership no later than September 15, 2020.

The leaders pledge to always strive to seek useful compromises to ensure the CPP wins together, and in the interests of all of its constituent members. This is evident by the fact that the CPP has successfully completed the selection of its candidates for fourteen (14) counties as follow, pending the resolution of Nimba County.

All Liberian Party (ALP) - Gbarpolu, Bomi and Grand Gedeh, Alternative National Congress (ANC) - Maryland, Cape Mount, Rivergee and Rivercess and Grand Kru and Unity Party - Bong, Lofa, and Margibi

Sinoe, Liberty Party - Montserrado, Grand Bassa, Rivercess and Grand Kru and Unity Party - Bong, Lofa, and Margibi

The Unity Party and All Liberian Party on yesterday officially withdrew their respective candidates from the Rivergee primary, and has given their support to the ANC's candidate while UP officially withdrew its candidate from Grand Gedeh for ALP's candidate.

The four (4) political leaders also call on all partisans of their parties and well-wishers to desist and avoid public expressions intended to further enflame the situation. They wish to reassure the Liberian people that as difficult as the challenge of coming together is, the CPP remains determined to achieve it for the Liberian people. The CPP can only grow stronger because of these experiences which test the character of our collective leaderships and shared commitments to the Liberian people - a test we will not fail.

Retailers to hike price

-due to shortage of Five Liberian banknotes
By Emmanuel Mondaye

The price of a sachet of water usually sold in the country for five Liberian dollars is likely to increase due to shortage of Five Liberian dollar banknote, consumers have revealed.

Local retail dealers who spoke to this paper recently said that the situation is creating serious problem on their daily sales, as customers requesting for change cannot get the banknote, which is the lowest domination of the country's currency.

Mrs. Hawa Thompson, who sells in the Paynesville Red Light business enclave, disclosed that most of her customers are constrained to either leave their LRD5.00 change with them or purchase at least two packets of water, which is very troubling.

She recalled that several months ago, a similar situation aroused when the bank notes disappeared from the market and retailers resulted to selling at LRD10 per sachet against their will.

For her part, Massa Massaquoi of Old Road community disclosed that she was informed by a wholesale distributor experiencing serious change problem in serving customers who troop at his distribution points to purchase the commodity.

Massa said she does not really know what is causing the continuous shortage of the local banknote (LRD5.00) which is one of the most used currencies in the country.

She added retailers would be compelled to increase price as they too are in business earn profit at the end of sales.

According to her, they buy a sachet from some distributors at the price of LRD100, LRD95.00, and LRD85.00 respectively, which is affecting their daily sales.

When this paper contacted the Public Affairs Department at the Central Bank of Liberia (CBL) for verification, a female employee of the Bank said those responsible to speak on the issue were absent.

The Weah administration printed 4 Billion Liberian dollars few months ago, all in LRD500 domination, which is the highest of the nation's currencies that range from 5, 10, 20 50, 100 to 500 denominations. -Editing by Jonathan Browne

Dalein en lice pour la présidentielle : Alpha Condé peut sauter le champagne

La stratégie du boycott de la présidentielle prônée naguère par l'UFDG (Union des forces démocrates de Guinée) pour protester contre le 3e mandat d'Alpha Condé, relève désormais du passé. En effet, le leader de ce parti d'opposition, Cellou Dalein Diallo, participera à la présidentielle du 18 octobre prochain.

L'annonce a été faite le 6 septembre dernier par le parti du principal opposant au régime d'Alpha Condé. La primeur de l'information a été accordée aux coordinateurs du FNDC (Front national pour la défense de la Constitution). Par voie de conséquence, Cellou Dalein Diallo s'exclut de cette coalition. Car, cette dernière avait été mise en place avec pour objectif d'empêcher le 3e mandat d'Alpha Condé et de boycotter le scrutin au cas où ce dernier acterait sa candidature.

Les partis politiques membres de cette coalition étaient donc tenus d'observer cette consigne. Le non-respect de celui-ci vaut renoncement à la qualité d'en être membre.

Là-dessus, il n'y a pas à pinailler. De ce point de vue, l'UFDG de Cellou Dalein Diallo n'est plus membre du FNDC puisqu'elle a décidé de présenter son mentor à la présidentielle du 18 octobre prochain. Et il retrouvera dans les starting-blocks, celui dont la candidature à un 3e mandat avait été à l'origine de la création du FNDC. Tout le monde aura compris qu'il s'agit d'Alpha Condé. Contre vents et marées et surtout après plusieurs mois de contestations qui ont laissé sur le carreau des dizaines de morts, ce dernier a annoncé récemment et officiellement, par sa propre bouche, sa candidature. Pour la 3e fois donc, Alpha Condé briguera la magistrature suprême. Et pour la troisième fois, il sera face à Cellou Dalein Diallo.

Côte d'Ivoire : l'improbable retour de l'ex-président Gbagbo

Au pouvoir entre 2000 et 2010, il souhaite revenir dans le jeu politique. De quoi raviver les tensions à l'approche de la présidentielle ivoirienne.

A moins de deux mois de l'élection, et dans un contexte déjà explosif, l'ancien président Laurent Gbagbo a fait savoir par l'intermédiaire de ses partisans qu'il souhaitait revenir dans le jeu politique, alors qu'il est pour l'heure toujours exilé en Belgique. Cet improbable retour intervient dix ans après la crise militaire qui avait contraint à l'exil, laissant le pays aux commandes d'Alassane Ouattara, son rival historique.

A la suite de cette défaite, l'avenir de Gbagbo s'annonçait sombre, puisqu'il avait été aussitôt poursuivi par la Cour pénale internationale (CPI) pour crime contre l'humanité. Mais alors que de nombreux éléments semblaient l'accabler, ses avocats sont finalement parvenus à le faire acquitter en 2019, lui rendant sa liberté, et lui permettant d'afficher à nouveau des ambitions politiques.

Néanmoins, le retour au pays de ce mastodonte de la vie politique ivoirienne s'annonce plus qu'hypothétique en raison d'un contexte qui lui est très défavorable : une fois de plus, l'actuel président Ouattara compte bien lui opposer une farouche résistance. Celui-ci n'a pas hésité à se porter candidat pour exercer un troisième mandat consécutif, alors même que la Constitution limite à deux le nombre de mandats. Il s'est cependant défendu de toute irrégularité en avançant le fait que ses quinquennats précédents se sont déroulés avant la mise en application de la nouvelle Constitution.

Une course à la présidence particulièrement tendue

« La crise que traverse le Mali signe aussi l'échec de décennies d'intervention internationale »

La politologue Isaline Bergamaschi interroge la capacité et la légitimité des bailleurs de fonds à construire un Etat de l'extérieur

Enseignante en sciences politiques à l'Université libre de Bruxelles (ULB), Isaline Bergamaschi a longuement travaillé sur l'aide publique au développement au Mali. Dans un article paru en 2014, « La chute d'un chouchou des agences d'aide au développement, le rôle de la coopération internationale dans la crise malienne » (The Journal of Modern African Studies, Cambridge University Press), elle montrait comment les financements internationaux dont dépend le Mali, assortis de préconisations de politiques publiques, avaient contribué au contexte de fragilité aboutissant au renversement du président Amadou Toumani Touré (ATT) en 2012.

Huit ans plus tard, alors que l'intervention étrangère s'est accrue pour répondre à la crise humanitaire et lutter contre le terrorisme, les questions posées par la mise sous tutelle de facto de l'Etat malien n'ont, selon elle, pas changé. Pour la chercheuse, le putsch du 18 août qui a conduit à la chute du président Ibrahim Boubacar Keïta devrait conduire la communauté internationale à s'interroger sur les modalités de son intervention sinon sur sa pertinence.

Faites-vous aujourd'hui la même analyse que pour la crise de 2012 pour expliquer le rejet d'Ibrahim Boukakar Keïta (IBK)? Isaline Bergamaschi L'intervention internationale au Mali a commencé bien avant l'opération militaire française débutée 2013. Le pays a une longue tradition de dépendance à l'aide internationale qui conduit à une coproduction des politiques publiques par les acteurs étrangers et des acteurs nationaux. Cette dépendance est visible et se fait cruellement ressentir quand, à l'occasion d'un coup d'Etat, une partie de la coopération internationale est suspendue : la capitale Bamako et l'économie tournent au ralenti.

Lors de la crise de 2012, ces donateurs sont apparus comme les sponsors, volontaires ou non, du régime d'ATT, malgré toute la contestation et la déception qu'il suscitait. La mauvaise gestion de la crise dans le nord du pays, la mauvaise gouvernance, l'augmentation de la corruption, des réformes économiques poussées par la Banque mondiale telle que la privatisation de la Compagnie malienne de développement des textiles (CMDT) ou le soutien de certaines ambassades ou agences de coopération au projet de réforme du Code de la famille sont autant de sujets qui, à l'époque, avaient cristallisé le mécontentement. Les donateurs sont restés sourds à cette montée de la colère, considérant que malgré toutes les imperfections du système, il était préférable d'essayer de renforcer les capacités de l'Etat malien.

Mais huit ans après, ce sont les mêmes causes qui ont poussé la population dans les rues dans un contexte sécuritaire très dégradé. Les pratiques dénoncées sous ATT ont perduré sous IBK. La crise que traverse le Mali n'est pas seulement une crise de l'Etat malien ou de la faillite de sa classe politique depuis la démocratisation en 1992. Elle signe aussi l'échec de décennies d'intervention internationale à travers la promotion d'un modèle de développement extraverti dans lequel les acteurs internationaux finissent par faire partie de l'Etat avec toutes les ambiguïtés que cela peut engendrer. Aujourd'hui, sa remise en cause dans le discours de l'opposition et des forces sociales et politiques favorables au coup d'Etat est plus centrale qu'en 2012.

Quels sont les problèmes posés par ce modèle?

Le fait que toutes les politiques publiques sont produites avec des acteurs internationaux pose un problème de démocratie puisque des personnes qui ne sont pas élues et n'ont aucune responsabilité vis-à-vis des citoyens maliens sont impliquées dans tous les ministères. Partout, il y a des experts et des assistants techniques étrangers payés par des gouvernements européens et tout cela est très « routinisé ».

Parallèlement, une partie importante de l'aide passe directement par des projets qui ne sont pas gérés par des institutions nationales, ce qui pose souvent des problèmes d'articulation, de doublon, mais aussi de pérennité, car ils ne sont pas intégrés pleinement aux politiques publiques. Les priorités et procédures des projets sont ceux des agences internationales. Cette situation s'est aggravée depuis 2012, puisque les acteurs internationaux ont massivement investi le champ humanitaire et sécuritaire.

Dalein en lice pour

Cette candidature a été dictée, peut-on dire, par les cadres du parti.

La politique de la chaise vide n'a jamais été payante sous nos tropiques

En effet, ces derniers, à l'issue d'une Assemblée plénière au siège de l'UFDG, le 2 septembre dernier, ont formellement demandé à leur président de se porter candidat pour éviter d'être dans une situation de forclusion, car le dépôt des candidatures prend fin le 8 septembre. Outre le risque de forclusion, l'objectif du parti de Cellou Dalein Diallo est de ne pas reproduire le scénario de mars dernier. En rappel, l'UFDG avait boycotté les législatives et le référendum constitutionnel. Résultat : le parti n'a plus aucun représentant à l'Assemblée nationale.

Cette situation a suscité beaucoup de mécontents au sein du parti. Un autre boycott risquerait donc de faire imploser l'UFDG. Cellou Dalein Diallo en a certainement pesé le pour et le contre avant de prendre sa décision. Et cela peut lui valoir des inimitiés au sein du FNDC. Et le qualificatif de traître ou encore de félon, pourrait être retenu contre lui par ses anciens camarades. Cela dit, chacun est libre de décrypter l'attitude de Cellou Diallo. Mais, il faut reconnaître que la politique de la chaise vide n'a jamais été payante sous nos tropiques.

En tout cas, les princes qui nous gouvernent ne sont pas gênés outre mesure de voir leurs opposants boycotter les élections. Une autre raison qui a pu motiver Cellou Diallo est la suivante : il joue son va-tout. En effet, ce scrutin pourrait représenter pour lui, celui de la dernière chance.

Côte d'Ivoire : l'improbable

calme pas la colère de ses adversaires qui s'insurgent contre cette candidature, notamment l'un de ses principaux opposants, l'ancien Premier ministre Henri Konan Bédié, qui a affirmé sa détermination à empêcher une nouvelle élection du président Ouattara : « Nous nous battons pour que notre victoire ne nous soit pas volée et nous ferons tout pour la faire prévaloir », a-t-il affirmé dans une déclaration aux médias le 31 août. La course à la présidence est donc particulièrement tendue, provoquant de vastes manifestations, organisées par chaque camp depuis le début du mois d'août, qui ont entraîné la mort d'une dizaine de personnes et causé plus de

En 2025, date de la prochaine présidentielle, rien ne dit que l'UFDG ne jettera pas son dévolu sur un candidat autre que lui. Déjà, le parti a été fortement ébranlé par des dissensions. Et justement, la décision de boycotter la présidentielle d'octobre prochain, y était pour quelque chose. Mais une chose est de se présenter à la présidentielle, une autre est de la gagner. En Guinée, Cellou Dalein Diallo aura du mal à la remporter.

En effet, Alpha Condé fera tout pour parachever ce qu'il a entamé. Et chez lui plus que chez tout le monde, « la fin justifie les moyens ». Outre le fait que toutes les institutions de la Guinée sont à sa solde, il y a aussi qu'il a réussi à dompter la communauté internationale au point que cette dernière n'ose pas fouiner son nez dans les affaires de la Guinée. Et cette tradition remonte à la Guinée de Sékou Touré. Alpha Condé organisera donc sa présidentielle, la gagnera sans coup férir puisqu'il a, en amont, tripatoillé le fichier électoral pour cela. Et la Cour constitutionnelle le proclamera président.

Et la communauté internationale le congratulera après quelques réserves teintées d'hypocrisie. Et la vie reprendra son cours normal.

En somme, Alpha Condé est en train de boire son petit lait pour après avoir défié le monde entier et son peuple en briguant un 3e mandat et avec la certitude de remporter haut la main la présidentielle d'octobre prochain. Et la cerise sur le gâteau pour lui, est que son principal opposant a décidé de prendre part au scrutin. L'un dans l'autre donc, on pourra bientôt dire que tout est accompli pour Alpha Condé.

deux cents blessés. « La société civile se mobilise, et le pouvoir s'est tourné vers la répression : tous les ingrédients sont réunis pour qu'il y ait de nouvelles tensions », anticipe, pessimiste, le chercheur au Ceri (Centre d'études et de recherches internationales) Richard Banégas, spécialiste de la politique ivoirienne.

Dans un tel contexte, Gbagbo n'a pas l'intention de rendre les armes, malgré ses 75 ans passés. Il peut en effet compter sur un réel soutien militant au sein d'une partie de la population ivoirienne, comme le précise Richard Banégas : « Il reste encore une réelle sensibilité pro-Gbagbo dans le pays, particulièrement présente dans les quartiers

La fracture technologique à venir

CAMBRIDGE - Le régime commercial international que nous connaissons actuellement, régi par les règles de l'Organisation mondiale du commerce et d'autres accords, n'est pas adapté à ce monde. Il a été conçu pour un monde de voitures, d'acier et de textiles, et non pas pour un monde de données, de logiciels et d'intelligence artificielle. Déjà mis sévèrement sous pression par la montée en puissance de la Chine et les réactions brutales contre l'hypermondialisation, il est totalement insuffisant pour faire face aux trois principaux défis que posent ces nouvelles technologies.

Premièrement, il y a la géopolitique et la sécurité nationale. Les technologies numériques permettent aux puissances étrangères de pirater les réseaux industriels, pratiquer le cyber-espionnage et manipuler les médias sociaux. La Russie a été accusée d'interférer dans les élections aux États-Unis et dans d'autres pays occidentaux par le biais de faux sites d'information et de la manipulation des médias sociaux. Le gouvernement américain a sévi contre le géant chinois Huawei, craignant que les liens de l'entreprise avec le gouvernement chinois ne fassent de ses équipements de télécommunications une menace pour la sécurité.

Deuxièmement, il y a des préoccupations au sujet de la vie privée individuelle. Les plates-formes Internet sont capables de collecter d'énormes quantités de données sur ce que les gens font en ligne et hors ligne, et certains pays ont des règles plus strictes que d'autres pour réglementer ce qu'ils peuvent en faire. L'Union européenne, par exemple, a imposé des amendes aux entreprises qui ne protègent pas les données des résidents de l'UE.

Troisièmement, il y a le côté économique. Les nouvelles technologies donnent un avantage concurrentiel aux grandes entreprises qui peuvent accumuler une énorme puissance sur le marché mondial. Les économies d'échelle et de gamme, ainsi que les effets de réseau, produisent des situations « tout au gagnant ». De plus, les politiques mercantilistes et d'autres pratiques gouvernementales peuvent donner à certaines entreprises ce qui semble être un avantage injuste. Par exemple, la surveillance par l'État a permis aux entreprises chinoises d'accumuler d'énormes quantités de données, ce qui leur a permis de conquérir le marché mondial de la reconnaissance faciale.

Une réponse commune à ces défis est d'appeler à une plus grande coordination internationale et à des règles mondiales. Une coopération réglementaire transnationale et des politiques antitrust pourraient produire de nouvelles normes et mécanismes d'application. Même lorsqu'une approche véritablement globale n'est pas possible - parce que les pays autoritaires et démocratiques ont de profonds désaccords sur le respect de la vie privée, par exemple - il est néanmoins possible pour les démocraties de coopérer entre elles et d'élaborer des règles communes.

Les avantages des règles communes sont évidents. En leur absence, des pratiques telles que la localisation des données, les exigences de cloud local et la discrimination en faveur des champions nationaux créent des inefficacités économiques dans la mesure où elles segmentent les marchés nationaux. Ils réduisent les gains du commerce et empêchent les entreprises de bénéficier de rendements d'échelle suffisants. En outre, les gouvernements font face à la menace constante que leurs réglementations soient sapées par des entreprises opérant dans des juridictions avec des règles plus laxistes.

Cependant, dans un monde où les pays ont des préférences différentes, les règles mondiales - même lorsqu'elles sont réalisables - sont inefficaces dans un sens plus large. Tout ordre mondial doit équilibrer les gains du commerce (maximisés lorsque les réglementations sont harmonisées) et les gains de la diversité réglementaire (maximisés lorsque chaque gouvernement national est entièrement libre de faire ce qu'il veut). Si l'hypermondialisation s'est déjà révélée fragilisée, c'est en partie parce que les décideurs ont donné la priorité aux gains du commerce par rapport aux avantages de la diversité réglementaire. Cette erreur ne doit pas être répétée avec les nouvelles technologies.

En fait, les principes qui devraient guider notre réflexion sur les nouvelles technologies ne sont pas différents de ceux concernant les domaines traditionnels. Les pays peuvent concevoir leurs propres normes réglementaires et définir leurs propres exigences de sécurité nationale. Ils peuvent faire ce qui est nécessaire pour défendre ces normes et leur sécurité nationale, y compris au moyen de restrictions au commerce et à l'investissement. Mais ils n'ont pas le droit d'internationaliser leurs normes et d'essayer d'imposer leurs réglementations à d'autres pays.

Considérez comment ces principes s'appliqueraient à Huawei. Le gouvernement américain a empêché Huawei d'acquiescer des sociétés américaines, a restreint ses opérations aux États-Unis, lancé des poursuites judiciaires contre sa haute direction, fait pression sur les gouvernements étrangers pour qu'ils ne travaillent pas avec l'entreprise et, plus récemment, a interdit aux entreprises américaines de vendre des puces à la chaîne d'approvisionnement de Huawei partout dans le monde.

Il existe peu de preuves que Huawei pratique de l'espionnage au nom du gouvernement chinois. Mais cela ne signifie pas qu'elle ne le fera pas à l'avenir. Les experts techniques occidentaux qui ont examiné le code de Huawei n'ont pas été en mesure d'exclure cette possibilité. L'opacité des pratiques des entreprises en Chine pourrait facilement masquer les liens de Huawei avec le gouvernement chinois.

Dans ces circonstances, il existe un argument de sécurité nationale plausible pour que les États-Unis - ou tout autre pays - restreignent les opérations de Huawei à l'intérieur de leurs propres frontières. Il n'incombe pas aux autres pays, dont la Chine, de remettre en question cette décision.

L'interdiction d'exporter imposée aux entreprises américaines est cependant plus difficile à justifier pour des raisons de sécurité nationale que l'interdiction des opérations de Huawei aux États-Unis. Si les activités de Huawei dans des pays tiers présentent un risque de sécurité pour ces pays, leurs propres gouvernements sont les mieux placés pour évaluer les risques et décider si un arrêt est approprié.

De plus, l'interdiction américaine confronte d'autres pays à de graves répercussions économiques. Cela crée des effets néfastes importants pour les entreprises nationales de télécommunications telles que BT, Deutsche Telekom, Swisscom et de nombreuses autres dans pas moins de 170 pays qui utilisent les kits et le matériel de Huawei. Les pays pauvres d'Afrique, qui dépendent massivement des équipements moins chers de l'entreprise, sont peut-être les plus touchés.

En bref, les États-Unis sont libres de fermer leur marché à Huawei. Mais les efforts des États-Unis pour internationaliser leur répression nationale ne sont pas légitimes.

L'affaire Huawei est le signe avant-coureur d'un monde dans lequel la sécurité nationale, le respect de la vie privée et les questions économiques interagiront de manière complexe. La gouvernance mondiale et le multilatéralisme échoueront souvent, pour de bonnes et de mauvaises raisons. Le mieux que nous puissions attendre est un patchwork de réglementations, basé sur des règles de base claires qui aident les pays à poursuivre leurs intérêts nationaux fondamentaux sans exporter leurs problèmes à d'autres. Soit nous concevons ce patchwork nous-mêmes, soit nous finirons, bon gré mal gré, avec une version désordonnée, moins efficace et plus dangereuse.

GoL Launches

Management and Coordination Unit (AMCU) and the subsequent adoption of this National Aid and NGO Policy of Liberia facilitated a new era of better coordinated aid flows to Liberia.

The Finance Minister added that Liberia is pursuing sources of revenue necessary to meet its expenditure needs to achieve an aid-independent era. He explained that the country is also putting into place the requisite institutional reforms to meet the demands of that era, while a clear strategy to tap into those resources with an unprecedented level of transparency and sustainability has been developed.

For her part, USAID Representative Sara Walter commended the Government of Liberia for the launch of the policy, expressing hope that it will serve the purpose intended.

Aid Management and Coordination has been a challenge over the years where most external assistance programs and projects have been managed and coordinated on an ad-hoc basis with roles and responsibilities loosely carried out by other government ministries and agencies leaving the Ministry of Finance and Development Planning with very limited information and also limited consolidated data on aid flow into Liberia.

It has also been established that limited coordination and management framework of aid has had little or negative impact on the full realization of aid objectives in meeting the results of the national development agenda of Liberia.

The absence of a National Aid Policy over the years has limited alignment of most external assistance programs and projects with the strategic objectives and application of aid to interventions as would be needed based on the national development strategy.

The National Aid Policy of Liberia is designed to establish an internal coordination mechanism to curtail waste or limited coordination and alignment in programs and projects.

The Policy also establishes a national coordination framework for collective engagement with Development Partners at the technical and policy level. In addition to defining the types of assistance and the preference of aid modalities, mostly in accordance with international consensus on aid delivery, the policy also clearly defines the roles and responsibilities of government institutions and development partners in the management of external assistance.

These roles and responsibilities are structured around the aid management cycle from initiation of aid to the monitoring and evaluation stage. According to the Policy, all proposals for aid shall be channeled through the Ministry of Finance and Development Planning for proper vetting, while Ministries, Agencies and Commissions along with the MFDP shall jointly establish GoL's position and participate in negotiations.

Moreover, a joint collaboration of GoL-Development Partners monitoring and evaluation shall be instituted. As Aid information shall be inputted and stored directly into the Liberia Project Dashboard by Development Partners, MACs and will be cross-verified by the Ministry of Finance and Development Planning.

National security

Also speaking at the appearance, Jefferson Karmoh said that the security institutions are thoroughly engaging every stakeholder in ensuring the situation is arrested, but low budgetary allocation is a problem.

Liberia Immigration Service Boss, Col. Budy said Liberia has about 180 border towns, but 140 of those borders are unprotected and vulnerable because of lack of resources to cater to officers who may take on assignment in those appalling areas.

Following their presentations, Grand Gedeh County Senator Alphonso Gaye said if he (Gaye) were the President of Liberia, he would have dismissed heads of the national security sector for neglect, unwillingness, and complacency in discharge of their respective duties.

Sen. Gaye lamented since the security actors are now in the know of the problems, what action have they taken towards the problem, instead of complaining about budgetary support.

He noted that the Liberian Legislature has never reduced budgetary allotments for security institutions since his days at the Capitol.

Gaye continued that due to failure by heads of the various security apparatus despite being in the know of the situation should warrant their dismissal.

But Montserrado County Senator Darius Dillon suggests that the security actors should present a 'special security operation budget' that lawmakers could act upon.

Adding his voice to the debate, Grand Gedeh County Senator Marshall Dennis said the invaders are armed carriers who could use the grounds to cause instability, if nothing were done speedily.

Senator Dennis recalled noted that during one of his visits to the United States, he was told by a U.S. Congressman that the entire West African region has been targeted as hot spot for 'Islamic terrorists', warning that delay or inaction by governments in the subregion could pose serious security challenge.

Several countries especially, Mali, Ivory Coast and Burkina Faso have suffered attacks separately from Islamist terrorists in recent years.

Following the heated debate, the senate plenary voted and instructed the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to write a 'memoire to authorities of Ivory Coast and Burkina Faso about the illegal aggression of their citizens at Liberia's borders. -Editing by Jonathan Browne

The Inspector General of the Liberia National Police Col. Patrick Sudue alarms here that the country faces serious national threat in the wake of reported invasion of forest in Gedeh County by over 9,000 Burkinabes, operating in self-style governance.

Speaking before full plenary in the chambers of the Liberian Senate at the Capitol on Wednesday, September 09, Col. Sudue said that the invasion by illegal migrants into the nation's dark forest is worrisome and should claim the attention of all Liberians especially, the government.

He said security authorities, including the Police, the National Security Agency and the Liberia Immigration Service are finding it difficult to speedily employ the rule of engagement or chase the invaders out as those terrains are cutoff due to bad road network and that fearlessly, the number of the Burkinabe is increasing on a daily basis.

According to him, despite the increase of the illegal migrants, they are reportedly engaging in farming and planting of cocoa and deforestation of Liberia's rain forest, which is affecting the echo system of the country.

Col. Sudue appeared before the senate along with Presidential National Security Advisor Jefferson Karmoh, Liberia Immigration Service Commissioners, Col. Robert Budy, Liberia's Internal Affairs Minister, Varney Sirleaf and other top officials from the national security sector.
